

FAMILY PLANNING TOOL

Questions Calls Meetings Visits

A printable family tool for safety checks, organization, communication, school or provider coordination, and support-first planning.

|                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                            |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| You may be here becauseThings feel urgent, confusing, tense, or scattered, and you need one safe first step instead of trying to fix everything at once. | This guide helps youA printable family tool for safety checks, organization, communication, school or provider coordination, and support-first planning.        |
| First safe stepCheck safety first. Then pick one task you can complete today: a call, a folder, a note, or a support request.                            | This is notThis does not replace 911, crisis help, legal advice, medical or mental-health care, safety planning, official forms, or current local verification. |

Safety first: Immediate danger belongs with 911. Call or text 988 for crisis support. Maine Crisis Line: 1-888-568-1112. If abuse, coercive control, stalking, or fear may be present, use a safe device and trusted support before joint communication, counseling, or mediation.

Current online version and related tools
<https://focaf.jtforme.com/resources/>

Start with safety and one practical step

When things feel urgent, choose one clear step instead of trying to solve everything at once.

- Check safety first: immediate danger belongs with emergency help.
- Choose one calm next step you can do today.
- Write down only what you need for planning and follow-up.
- Use counseling, school/provider support, 211, legal aid, or official forms when more help is needed.

Child-centered note for Questions Calls Meetings Visits: Save only what helps with safety, stability, school, health, routines, support, or the next clear step.

Next seven days planner

Keep tasks small and realistic.

| Day or date      | One task | Who can help |
|------------------|----------|--------------|
| Today            |          |              |
| Tomorrow         |          |              |
| This week        |          |              |
| Next appointment |          |              |
| Follow-up        |          |              |

Child-centered note for Questions Calls Meetings Visits: Save only what helps with safety, stability, school, health, routines, support, or the next clear step.

Document and contact tracker

Keep records organized for yourself. Share sensitive details only with trusted helpers, qualified professionals, official agencies, legal counsel, or emergency/crisis support when needed.

|                            |  |
|----------------------------|--|
| Document or note to save   |  |
| Where it is stored         |  |
| Person or office contacted |  |
| Date                       |  |
| Follow-up needed           |  |

Child-centered note for Questions Calls Meetings Visits: Save only what helps with safety, stability, school, health, routines, support, or the next clear step.

Support options before escalation

When it is safe, support-first steps can reduce confusion and conflict.

- Counseling, parent coaching, or family support
- School, childcare, doctor, counselor, or care-team coordination
- 211 Maine, crisis supports, housing/food/transportation help
- Legal aid, official forms, or qualified counsel when a legal step is needed

Child-centered note for Questions Calls Meetings Visits: Save only what helps with safety, stability, school, health, routines, support, or the next clear step.

Keep personal details private

Use these pages for your own planning. Share sensitive details only with trusted helpers, qualified professionals, official agencies, legal counsel, or emergency/crisis support when needed.

- Do not put child names, medical records, sealed records, confidential court materials, or private allegations into broad emails, social media, or untrusted forms.
- Store sensitive documents somewhere safe.
- Ask a qualified professional or official office when safety, health, legal process, or deadlines are involved.
- Use general review notes only for wording, policy, process, safety, clarity, and implementation suggestions.

Child-centered note for Questions Calls Meetings Visits: Save only what helps with safety, stability, school, health, routines, support, or the next clear step.

Before you stop

Pick one next step that is safe, realistic, and helpful.

|                                  |  |
|----------------------------------|--|
| One thing I can do today         |  |
| One support door to check        |  |
| One document or note to organize |  |
| One person or provider to update |  |
| One thing to leave for later     |  |

Child-centered note for Questions Calls Meetings Visits: Save only what helps with safety, stability, school, health, routines, support, or the next clear step.